FY2011 Q1 -- RT Ticket Feedback / Client Satisfaction Survey Results

Interpreting the Report

The scores and charts on the first two pages show cumulative averages over 12 weeks of client responses to our per-ticket survey questions. Each ticket belongs to a specific queue, and scores are reported at the queue level on page 3. The IS&T level rolls up all the surveys; Service Desk rolls up many CSS queues; Call Center is a subset of that and excludes the Repair Center, which is shown on its own. For all the charts, the 12-week window rolls forward each week, and the scores are always across that window.

The multiline charts try to convey the rhythm of service performance over time and the relative levels of satisfaction by service dimension. A high-performing service would have all its lines flowing consistently at or above 4.5 and not too far apart from each other.

Some queues have survey responses too intermittent to graph with weekly readings; those are show using only summary numbers for each dimension. The numbers are 12-week averages.

Detailed results by month by queue are shown on the third page showing up to 3 months and resetting at the beginning of the quarter. Color-

all-Qs-surveys FY2011 Q1 -- RT Ticket Feedback / Client Satisfaction Survey Results

These Queues have low enough response rates per week that a weekly graph would be misleading.

All scores presented are a Quarterly average, to smooth out sparse data. Monthly detail appears in the table on the next page.

Note: the big box score of "Overall Satisfaction" refers to question 7 on the survey, not an aggregate of the other scores listed below.

I was very grateful for your staff who very professionally got me out of a serious problem of my own causing. (However, a dysfunctional Windows7 lack of responsiveness was the proximate trigger.) 2. The job was slowed somewhat because you sent me queries by email, and I had asked that I be phoned because I didn't have email without my computer. (Later I borrowed our daughter's old PC laptop, so had email in the evenings.) 3. It would have helped to have had a short tutorial when I collected the laptop. Everything worked differently and repeatedly had to phone to get advice. For instance, I had a surprise when I found that I didn't have Picasa, with all my photos and diagrams. I was assured that I would find them elsewhere in some Windows program. (Alas, I hate Windows, and was trying to switch over to Ubuntu, but was told that you don't support dual-boot systems, so I should forget about 5.00 Linux. I think that this is a little hard.) |

So, the long hold times are my only complaint, suggestion for improvement. When I'm on hold, the announcement that I am on hold comes on every 30 seconds, which makes it difficult to concentrate on work on my desk while I'm waiting for a person to answer my call. I know the announcement is meant to reassure callers that they are still on hold and haven't been cut off, but I find it annoying and distracting. Perhaps you could give callers an option for a "silent hold." An announcement of estimate wait time would also be helpful, so I could make an informed decision whether I wanted to continue to hold or try back again   |

When I explained my problem, she immediately told me that they had gotten other calls with same issue so I knew it was not just an issue with what I was doing. Although the final resolution came in a day or so (the timeout period was reset overall), she told me that if I waited 15 minutes, the screen would reset and I could access the info I needed to (which was the case). In using the help desk, I find the most difficult part is trying to explain what my problem so that a technician can help. I am not particularly knowledgeable on systems or platforms or software - so being told how I might find that out to give the right information would be helpful. In the follow-up email, they did give me options which was helpful to select from. (i.e. if you have a PC you are likely using A or B (or look here to get that info))   |

|           |  |                    | This problem persisted for many weeks if not longer. The main issue was that the VWR staff seemed uninterested in resolving the problem and kept telling me and MIT IST that there was no problem at all. I discovered the fix myself when checking the ecat VWR site and was notified some time later that your staff also noticed that it was fixed. I had completely given up on this and had asked your staff to stop trying because I was tired of hearing that there was no problem, even after I had described the problem in exquisite detail more than once. Since I was still able to use the website, it became more trouble than it was worth to continue. To this day I do not know who fixed it or how but thank you. The IST person who was helping me was at all times professional and very persistent but this job may have required action from a third party (VWR IT) to actually do the work. Thank you for your 5.00 time. Best Regards, Michael Cutler mbcutler@mit.edu |

No posting of the full-building outage was made on 3down, either during or after the outage. (2) I see now that my ticket was marked as resolved about two hours after its creation; I assume that network service had been restored at that time, though I did not verify this until about forty-five minutes later; I therefore assume that the staff were able to fix the issue. (3) Though a two-hour response time to a ticket would be good in most circumstances, I feel that a response time of more than an hour to a page is not entirely satisfactory. (4) The building in question had its network service restored, so that's okay. (5) As no communication was received, no explanation was possible. (6) This rela! tes to (3); I feel that pageable outages should get responses to the requestor. (7) My experiences here seem to further my |

| 5/17/2010 | Help Desk::Business Help  | 1240819 | 5.00 This question started with a discrepancy between a DWH report and a record in SAP. Huey Chan investigated the problem very quickly and responded with information. Sometimes I ask a question and the answer is over my head technically. However, other senior people more familiar with the issue (root cause was two MIT IDs for same person), were able to take it forward and resolve the problem. The employe (formerly a student) emailed "I will be quite relieved when the other number finally has been permanently terminated. | 5/10/2010 Help Desk::UNIX/Linux | 981425             |      | Red Hat Enterprise Linux is supposedly fully supported, and that should mean that MIT's satellite update server (which we are required to use) should work. Delays of days to weeks to get answers to basic tickets (which presumably affect all users on campus) are unacceptable, as is the fact that IS&T knows about a problem with the server and hasn't been able to fix it for months. The machine that is affected is used for day-to-day work in the lab. Being unable to update is a security problem, and malfunctions that prevent us from installing new packages is a significant waste of time that would otherwise be spent doing research. If you'd like to contact me, my email address is luto@mit.edu. |

This was good in that it will preserve the correspondence and contact information. However, it does not preserve attachments, and it is not as easily searchable based on database fields (date, sender, etc.). I found it quite surprising that there is not a straightforward way to do this operation either through Webmail or through some other software (e.g. ftp). In the future, it might be cool if MIT could offer a service whereby they sell a DVD backup of a mailbox in Outlook format. I would imagine that it would be handy for many people, for example, graduating students. |

|           | RCC::WestCampus           | 1100270 | 2.50 | I'm not sure things have really improved in terms of the wireless network at W85. It may night be a technical problem however. It seems like residents are continuing to set up the own access points because the feel dissatisfied with the connectivity afforded by MIT. I should also point out that this gets increasingly frustrating as we near the end of the term a everyone is stressed. Again, I'm not sure the fix is as much technical as it is educating users.  |
|           | Telecom::3help            | 1204164 | 4.17 | My land line stops working every 2nd month. That's a prett bad level of service   |
|           | TNIS::Trouble Calls       | 1210713 |      | Shortly after I submitted the ticket, the problem resolved its and I canceled the ticket before IS&T had a chance to addres it.   |
|           |                           | 1205993 | 5.00 | It is very important for workers in offices to have any proble fixed right away. The technician was dispatched immediately and I was back up within two hours of the report of a problem Q5 I rated less, but I'm sure if I had been interested in the reason then I could have gotten more information. The fact if did not ask and it was not important to the particular job at hand.  |

|           | Help Desk::Athena         | 1191413 | 3.33 | My dissatisfaction is due to the fact that I was ORIGINALLY told that I was basically out of luck. It was only when I persisted that I was put in touch with the service that does to backups. In addition, the person who originally responded failed to remind me that I might look in the OldFiles folder eventually was reminded, several days later, but by then it w too late. Once I was put in touch with the right people, everything was great  |

| 4/5/2010 | Help Desk::Business Help  | 1198565 | 1.67 | This is the second time recently that the ticketing system has failed to notify me of a response to my help ticket. I thought that no one was responding to my request and it wasn't until I received this survey that I knew it was closed. It was settled in 3 days, but I didn't know it. If the people responding to the ticket need to manually copy the requester, they should be told, but this seems like a problem with the ticketing system. I also feel like they should have checked that I was satisfied with the result before closing the ticket. I just checked on my problem now, and it is resolved perfectly, but it seems weird that I didn't know any action had been taken, and that they closed the ticket without knowing if my problem was resolved.   |

|          | Help Desk::Call Center    | 1204519 | 5.00 | ALWAYS extremely satisfied with your responses. You perform a much needed service. Many thanks. Professor David Paul  |
|          |                           | 1204062 |      | I have to say it was pretty much perfect. He understood my question precisely. He asked just the right questions. And then the answer was catered perfectly to my level of expertise (which was pretty high, so he didn't make me go through a lot of details that he could tell I already knew). I was really very, very pleased.  |
|          |                           | 1202660 | 3.00 | As good as possible. The staff member could not have done   |

|          |                           | 1201592 |      | My problem isn't with the handling of the ticket, it is with the level of communication in general from IS&T regarding TSM policies. Neither I, my system administrator, nor anyone in my department was aware that the reduced level of backup was occurring with our subscription. It was not clear at all to us, and in fact we were never told that even Outlook will not be backed up if it isn't closed when TSM is running. It took me 4 days from the instigation of the trouble ticket to when I found this information out. While the response I got was professional, it came way too late for me to attempt to retrieve information from the crashed hard drive since I had already sent it back to Dell. Because of that, I've lost almost 10 years worth of work, and only the last 2 because I had a local hard drive back up. TSM was useless to me in regards to anything I cared about, and my department is now going with our own backup system that we know we can trust. I think that better c! ommunication on the part of services needs to happen with IS&T and the end users. |

|          | Help Desk::Service Center | 1200101 |      | anything at this time to improve what you provide.  you guys were definitely helpful, but more than a bit harsh when I dropped my laptop off - I guess I had really done a number on it, but it would have been appreciated if you had been a bit nicer, maybe had a sense of humor. Ah well, not a big deal. you fixed my laptop! thank you! :-)   |
|          |                           | 1197488 |      | I was pleased with the work, but did have to wait four days to get my machine back because some people were out sick and nobody was able to take over and look at it. In conversation with some people who asked how my machine was doing, I explained that people were out and nobody was looking at it. I then got immediate attention, received an email explaining the software problem I was experiencing, and voila, the next day, my machine was delivered to me all fixed. Thank you.   |

| 4/5/2010 | Help Desk::Service Center | 1195781 | 4.17 | The laptop was formatted but the original problem was not solved (a problem with the monitor not working). The staff never checked out whether the monitor worked and so the formatting was useless.   |

|          | RCC::EastCampus           | 1034528 | 4.17 | Problem was never really addressed. I ended up moving my computer to be closer to the wireless router in the hall. I'm still convinced that residents in the building have wireless routers that are disturbing the MIT wireless network. No big deal. Thanks again. James   |

|          | Help Desk::Athena         | 1190454 | 5.00 | My issue was thoroughly resolved by IS&T. They even followed-up a week or so after their first response to check in, and in fact that proved very useful because I still hadn't quite been able to fix the issue and had kind of given up for the time being. Had they not gotten back in touch I probably would have had to start another ticket in a few months when I remembered I still needed to fix the issue! Many thanks to everyone for their help.                             |
|          |                           | 1147706 | 4.17 | The fact that I asked about a widespread problem and was told "we've never heard of this" suggests that IS&T isn't very aware of the state of the Athena system from the user's point of view. Although I've always found IS&T to be very responsive when I report problems, most users don't bother to complain, so problems go undetected for months. It would make the system more useful if support staff were more proactive in checking for non-functioning hardware and software. |
|          | Help Desk::Business Help  | 1198406 | 5.00 | As if turned out, I didn't realize that the "error icon" was permanently at the top of the window as an indicator, so there wasn't actually a "problem"! However, the IST help desk personal that I interacted with three times in the past leaves great room for improvement. He was a bureaucrat that had the license for the MIT license agreements memorized and refused to listen to the customer. He even refused to provide his name so I could not file a formal complaint against him.  |

But, even if they had not solved my problem, they were very professional, clear, and timely. Great iob! This is a great resource for MIT.   |
